

Mapping Showcase 2012 – Discover What's New in Mapping Community

For one day only on Thursday 6 December 2012, Lord's Cricket Ground in London, Mapping Showcase 2012 once again brings together the GIS, surveying, cartography and GPS industries to provide a free to attend, commercial exhibition with a range of education and support sessions, keynote presentations and fun activities throughout the day.

The event aims to attract those who use maps at home or at work and want to find out about the latest products and solutions, learn about new technologies through a series of focused masterclasses, receive best practice advice from industry bodies and experts and network with those who share a common interest.

It will especially appeal to those within the property, utility, transportation, local and central government, environmental, insurance and surveying markets who rely on mapping in one form or another.

CDR Group will have an exhibition stand at the event, so come along and see examples of some of the work that we have been undertaking lately.

Keynote talks, to be conducted in the Lord's Media Centre, and a full programme of enlightening masterclass sessions will cover an array of mapping-based themes within the GIS, cartography, GPS, surveying and computing fields. These are also free for delegates to attend on a first come first served basis as places are limited.
